

will make of a vicious man, both a criminal and a hypocrit. An educated criminal will multiply crime a hundred fold under the shape of scientific process, and will find a thousand ways of removing from him the hand of coercive justice. Pagan Rome, in her most glorious days of highest education and artistic culture was so rotten in her morals that Tacitus, the historian exclaims: "Corrumpere et corrumpi saeculum vocatur." "To corrupt and be corrupted, this is the fashion of the day."

The theory of the moralizing effects of intellectual and esthetic culture has no foundation either in facts or in the natural order of things. The child, therefore, must be taught the precepts of moral law together with elementary or higher knowledge.

A small boy was reciting in a geography class. The teacher was trying to teach him the points of the compass. She explained: "On your right is the south, your left the north, and in front of you is the east. Now what is behind you?"

The boy studied a moment, then puckered up his face and bawled: "I knew it. I told ma you'd see that patch in my pants."

God's plans like lilies, pure and white, unfold:
We must not tear the close-shut leaves apart,
Time will reveal the calyxes of gold.
